

BRAVERMAN
Reproductive
Immunology P.C.
Answers for Recurrent Pregnancy Loss

November 28, 2016

To: American Board of Integrative Medicine

Re: letter of Recommendation for Dr. Sangeeta Pati MD

I have known Dr. Pati personally and professionally since 1990, as we were both residents in OB/GYN at Georgetown University Medical Center. Throughout the years, we have kept in touch and collaborated professionally.

Dr. Pati's background is both international and varied. After completing her residency Dr. Pati worked as a Director for an International Health Organization funded by the Gates Foundation providing care and education internationally. Working in India, Bangladesh, Nepal, Kenya, Tanzania, Egypt, Dominican Republic, Thailand and Morocco was both eye opening and formative.

Upon returning to the United States in a more "traditional" medical setting Dr. Pati embarked in a professional quest for learning and research that ultimately led her to become one of the leading medical experts in Integrative Medicine, especially with regards to women's health.

I would like to mention that it is thanks to courageous efforts by physicians like Dr. Pati that we can now have an institution like the American Board of Integrative Medicine. In the not too distant past an integrative approach to medical care was often derided and received push back. Dr. Pati is one of those pioneering physicians who was able to innovate with an eye toward the future of medicine without forgetting the solid fundamentals of evidence-based medicine. I am honored to give Dr. Pati the strongest recommendation for acceptance to the American Board of Integrative Medicine.

I am a Board-Certified OB/GYN, practicing reproductive medicine in New York. I am a Graduate of Georgetown University and Columbia University.

Andrea Vidali MD